Creative Miracles

By MARION STEWART

Seven days sufficed, we are told, to create the earth, with the heavens included for good measure. Now I'm not exactly claiming that this first of miracles has been repeated, but in just four times seven days something very like a modern miracle has been wrought at Rolling Hills, that interesting part of the Rancho Palos Verdes that lovers of homes and the outdoors in combination are watching with keen attention. Just a month ago I dropped in at the Gate House, heard tell of purposes and plans, bumped over roads in the making, looked upon the untouched hill slopes, saw a house or two on the heights.

Yesterday I visited Rolling Hills again, found a world transformed, a creative dream become reality. Huge palms flank the entrance; flowers in gay profusion bloom about the friendly gate house; a wide boulevard all but completed—an extension of Crenshaw—leads directly to the property. Within the gates, surfaced, tree-lined roads wind off in all directions; charming houses, fitting perfectly into the hill contours—homes—gardens with spreading shade trees; neat picket fences running down the slopes. Barns and corrals too, with horses happily at home in them.

Here on these sunny hills where formerly only squirrels frisked, today children are romping. In one doorway a baby—the first baby born at Rolling Hills—sleeps serenely in his carriage. Down in the corral the Shetland pony pricked up his ears, watched the sleek new bus drive up, bringing his young master home from school, all set for a gallop over the hills.

A few short weeks ago, paper plans and a vision. Today, realization. Families are living and doing at Rolling Hills, reveling in the delights of a return to the soil—under luxurious conditions. If you like to watch a creative enterprise in the making; if you find inspiration in the purposeful activity, in the growth of trees and roads and houses; if you enjoy observing the transformation of houses into homes—the setting up of lares and penates—in short, if you would see as interesting a bit of creation as is to be found within the radius of many a long day's journey, then visit Rolling Hills. And soon. For at the rate things are going the joyous days of pioneering will soon be a memory and this appealing sector of Rancho Palos Verdes will be a fully settled and completed community.

Vaudeville Frolic At Mason

Federal Theatres announces a gala fall vaudeville frolic now playing at the Mason, with 12 stellar acts participating under the direction of Gene Stone. The vaudeville frolic will hold the Mason stage from Oct. 20 to Nov. 1, and big-time headline acts will include Skeeter and Ray in a travesty on Cleopatra entitled "She Missed Her Marc"; the Albrights in "The Great Trunk Mystery"; George Green, the "Bill Robinson on skates"; Clark and Dexter; Baby Doll Dance, featuring girls of the ensemble, and many other features.

"The Warrior's Husband," Julian Thompson's gay comedy of ancient Greece and the warring Amazons, is held over at the Hollywood Playhouse until Oct. 28, and the Mayan, Uncle Sam's popular 11th and Hill show-house, will be dark until Oct. 27, when another important premiere is scheduled.

Fun And Frolic

With The Business Women's Club On October 31

Get ready for the fun night of the year, the great old night of Hallowe'en. The National Business and Professional Women of Torrance are sponsoring a dance at the civic auditorium on that evening, Saturday, Oct. 31, and the event promises to be one of the social highlights of the year.

Hallowe'en decorations will lend atmosphere. There will be balloons, squawkers, horns, serpentine confetti, prizes for the best costumes, and no effort will be spared to make the night one of fun and frolic.

Shirey's orchestra, one of the most popular musical groups in the harbor section, has been engaged to play. Their music is peppy, rhythmic and bound to please.

All those who attend are invited to wear Hallowe'en costume. If that does not suit your taste or inclination, hard time regalia or ordinary dress may be worn.

If makes no difference what you wear, the main idea is to come, dance and enjoy an evening of Hallowe'en fun.

Soft drink thirst quencher will be served from the refreshment counter in the kitchen.

Tickets are now on sale and may be obtained from members or at the door. Invitations have been sent to other N.B.P.W. clubs in the district, and the local club hopes to find the auditorium filled with merry-makers on the gala night.

Be one of the throng, enjoy a good time, and if you are one of the costumed patrons you may win a cash prize.

Louie In Demand At Social Events

Since Louis Zamperini returned home from his European tour, where he took part in the Olympic Games at Berlin, he finds himself much in demand as an after dinner speaker and radio broadcaster. Louis gave a 15-minute talk over a Los Angeles station last week, refused 11 invitations to speak at teas and accepted six. He now has on his engagement book three social events, one of them a woman's club of Santa Monica, where he will be the guest speaker, telling of his experiences abroad. If the rush keeps up he is going to need a social secretary.

Louie manages to hold up his end at school along with his public appearances and is making excellent grades in his studies. He stands well up at the head of his class.

Rare Engravings Are On Display

The Palos Verdes Community Arts Association is unusually fortunate in securing a loan exhibition of old engravings and drawings—Miss Margaret M. Juno has made available to the association some 16 rare old prints which form part of a well-known eastern collector's collection and includes such artists as Cornelius Cort (1574) and Giovanni Orlandi (1602).

The association also has the opportunity of selecting additional rare engravings from an old portfolio, the property of Mrs. Dorothy M. Lynes. In this group are the works of Egidius Sadler (1600), Albert Durer (1800) and Bartolozzi and others. Also in this collection are some drawings by Henry Briggs R. A. (1825), made during a walking tour, and several other drawings of the same period.

The Community Arts Association cordially invites the public to meet Miss Juno and Mrs. Lynes at a tea in the Palos Verdes art gallery on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 25, from 3 to 5.

ASK FOR THESE BOOKS AT THE LIBRARY

Jamaica Inn by Daphne Du Maurier is a wind-swift romance of the Cornish Moors and a tapestry of high adventure for readers of every age and taste. Those readers who remember Donn Byrne and Stevenson and the thrills of Jeffrey Farrol's "Broadway Highway" will find sheer enjoyment in "Jamaica Inn."

We recommend also "The Clansmen" by Ethel Bollean. Sweeping thru the 250-year story of the Clan Stuart of Ardenwee we read of Alan Stuart, last of his line. Full of the courage and clan loyalty of his ancestry he seeks as did they, adventure and romance. From college to war; from riches to poverty; from youthful sentiment to rich love, he is always a Highlander. A memorable book and a memorable character.

An unusual book is "The Unmaking of a Russian," by Nicholas Wreden. This stands out among the many stories of the Russian revolution for it combines drama of thrilling personal adventure with a remarkably clear-cut account of the whole period. In fact, the professor of Russian history at Harvard says it gives a better picture of Russian civil war than any other.

"I Write As I Please," by Walter Duranty has been an absorbing favorite ever since its publication some months ago. Having been for the better part of a decade the eyes and ears of millions of Americans, contemporary experiments, the Soviet, Walter Duranty has now written a book. "The best newspaper man's story of a reporter's job that I have ever encountered," says Frank Simmons, and he goes on to state, "After all, Duranty has been the greatest foreign correspondent who has written for the English speaking people in post-war years. Most of his book is about Soviet Russia. He wants to find out all he can about it and his curiosity never fails. He started anti-bolshevik and never became a Red though he dropped, one by one, his prejudices and recognized what was Asiatic in the phenomena. For you and me and the rest of us who are trying to know what communism looks like, feels like, his book is invaluable, but in the end he has no answer."
